REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION. To the Republican electors of Pennsylvania...

The story that John Bull had secretly pledged Spain to keep Uncle Sam from interfering with Cuba...

The Drift Towards Harrison. Had General Harrison been a shrewd and cunning politician...

substantial traits of an intellect not under the influence of Blaine's caprices.

The world-at-large is getting together. Under these circumstances it would be foolish for the United States to persist in its adherence to a standard of weights and coinage...

The Carlisle declination is interpreted by his friends to have a string to it. But it will probably not become necessary for him to pull that string.

Resorting to an Old Trick. The Philadelphia Record is the one Democratic newspaper coming in our mails that has the hardihood to credit the Wilson bill with being a better revenue producer than the McKinley bill.

The Mission of the Press. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin—one of those volunteers of the press who add variety to the life of newspaper editors by furnishing comment and advice gratis—writes to that excellent journal...

It does not, however, supplement its figures by explaining that during the last nineteen months of the McKinley law imports were held back by foreign dealers in the expectation that the American tariff would be lowered by the Democrats.

It will be apparent to a child born on this day that there was a "keep off the grass" sign of insolence in the Republican's armless-woman picture of the charity ball.

It does not seem possible that even the milk of human kindness will induce Mr. Bedford to become chief of Scranton politics.

Indifferent, indeed, is the local Democratic politician who can discuss the municipal patronage situation without whippers in this voice.

Major Penman and Solicitor Torrey will do well not to collide with "the greatest show on earth" if they wish to retain the respect of the small boy.

Philadelphia who display the greatest activity in stringing the fish are generally absent at bait-dragging time.
